A Washing Recipe.

Within a week or two, one of our city papers has contained an advertisement, offering for one dollar to give a recipe for washing clothes. For one dollar we will give the following, which is probably as good as the one advertised, and a whole volume of the Prairie Farmer besides:

"Dissolve 1-4 lb. of lime in boiling water, straining twice through a flannel bag; dissolve separately 1-2 lb. of soap and 1-2 lb. of soda; boil the three together. Put six gallons of water into the boiler, and when it boils, add the mixture. The limes, which must have been steeped in cold water for twelve hours, are rung out, any stains rubbed with soap, and put into the boiler, where they must boil for thirty-five minutes. They are then drawn, (the liquor being preserved, as it can be used three times,) placed in a tub, and clear, boiling water poured over them. Rub them out, rinse them well in cold water, and they are ready for drying.

By this process, two thirds of the ordinary labor of washing is saved; bleaching is dispensed with entirely; the clothes are much cleaner; and are less worn than by the ordinary mode of washing. This mixture in no way damages the fabric."—Farmer.

A Great Neglect.

There is one great negligence with farmers—a neglect to keep farm accounts. How few people do this. And yet there is scarcely a branch in life that requires it more. How can a man know what he is doing, unless he keeps an account? For instance, in our mixed farming, how can a man know whether it is more profitable to raise wheat or corn, turnips or carrots, unless he knows the cost of each, as well as the profit? We are apt to look at large profits rather than expenses, and often to our disadvantage.

Why is this neglect?

"Oh, it is so much trouble! Yes, that is the lazy excuse. Now, the worst of it is, to begin. It will soon be easy; and then, at the end of the year, when you have got an account of everything, you can, at your leisure, see where the most profit is, what pays the best, and thus take advantage the next year. When the habit is once formed, it will be easy as well as beneficial.

The Mule.

A correspondent of the Wisconsin Farmers sums up the merits of the mule, as compared with the horse, as follows:

"1. He is much more easily and cheaply raised than his cousin, the horse. 2. He eats but little more than half as much when matured. 3. He is satisfied with and thrives upon a coarser and less expensive kind of provender. 4. It costs less to keep him in harness and shoes. 5. He is proportionately stronger. 6. He is very much tougher. 7. He is less liable to disease. 8. He has more sense and docility. 9. He is better adapted to some important kinds of work. 10. He is a true puller, and, when loaded, a quick traveller. 11. He sells for a better price. 12. He lives more than twice as long. 13. He is better looking. 14. In nothing but fleetness is he excelled by the horse.

A CERTAIN CURE FOR THE BITE OF A MAD DOG.—The following is worthy the attention of all, particularly as the season is coming on when dogs are "no longer safe."

Mix one pound of common salt in a quart of water, and then bathe and squeeze the wound with the same one hour; then bind a little more salt on the wound for twelve hours.

The author of this receipt was bitten six times by mad dogs and always cured himself by the above mixture, and offered to suffer himself to be bitten by any mad dog in order to convince mankind that what he offered was a real truth, which numbers could testify.

COTTON NOT A FAILURE.—We wish to do ex-King Cotton simple justice.

M. C. L. Peck, living near Burlington, in Coffey county, has twenty-one acres devoted to cotton this year. Seven acres are upland and fourteen bottom. The last is much the best, though all is fair. Mr. Peck has the assistance of two good negroes in its cultivation, and promises to make it pay him well. He will be recollected by many of our readers as the gentleman who brought several hundred bushels of cotton seed from Helena early in the spring. Glad to see him succeed.—State Journal.
